Rocks and minerals can be found everywhere, but there is a learning process involved. Some places are better than others, and it takes an advanced level of practice before you can find something interesting nearly anywhere. But first let's review what kinds of people look at rocks and minerals, and what they look for:

Where to Find Specific Types of Rocks and Minerals

When we look at a rock we see something very solid. Indeed this is its main property as a material. However, appearances can be deceiving, and rock has many other properties. Some of these are very obvious to us all. Anyone who has been in an earthquake will have experienced the fact that rock can behave elastically.
