The ways adults learn have a great effect on their ability to acquire and apply knowledge, seek learning experiences, and enjoy participating in the education process. All adults have learning styles that best suit them. Adults often have a preference for one style over another, but these preferences may vary depending on the situation and how learning objectives are to be achieved.

All staff development specialists face the challenge of motivating learners who are reluctant to participate in an education program. These learners' reactions can range from mild annoyance to outright hostility. Their attitudes affect other learners, making it difficult to establish or maintain a positive learning environment, whether the setting is a classroom or a distance learning situation.
