Kidney stones affect both the mother and the unborn baby, negatively impacting health, development, and delivery. Being pregnant doesn't necessarily increase the chances you're going to develop kidney stones, but being pregnant can make it harder to remedy them. Every pregnant, or soon-to-become pregnant, woman should pay special attention to habits that discourage kidney stones.

Start by laying the flagstones on top of the grass to check spacing (Image 1). Arrange pieces to make the path look natural, and rearrange the stones as necessary to obtain a random balance of color and shape (Image 2). As a general rule, lay two smaller pieces of flagstone adjacent to every large one.

10 The Volcano Bird. Not all creatures think of volcanoes as instruments of destruction. One very strange bird actually depends on them to survive. The Maleo is a highly endangered species that relies on geothermal energy to incubate its eggs. During nesting season, the maleo specifically seeks out exposed volcanic areas and uses their heat for the eggs to hatch.
